Public Urged To Attend Meeting on Metro Airport Expansion

By Dennis Oakes, Community Development Director, City of Romulus

Wayne County officials are attending a public meeting – to be held at Romulus City Hall, 11111 Wayne Road, on Tuesday, February 9, at 7:30 p.m. – to discuss their current proposals for expansion of Metro Airport and residential noise abatement. Various plans for the expansion have been discussed since 1988, and a portion of the program is already underway. Other portions of the program are still unfunded, and depend on the County's ability to successfully sell bonds to be paid off by a proposed $3 per passenger fee (PFC). City officials and staff have been involved in studies of the proposed Airport expansion, and have served on various committees examining noise abatement programs.

For years, various rumors have been circulating in Romulus concerning the Airport expansion plans. The following is a summary of information that has been provided to the City by County officials.

The County's most recent plan requires the sale of $750 million in revenue bonds backed by the $3 PFC. Whether the County can successfully sell bonds backed by this fee – and by the financial strength of the Airport's major carrier, Northwest Airlines – is uncertain, according to Crain's Detroit Business magazine.

The $750-million plan calls for several specific projects, both on- and off-field. Major on-field improvements are:

- $65 million – fourth parallel runway;
- $23 million – land purchases for a proposed south access and the fourth parallel runway (the County has already spent approximately $25 million from other funds for purchase of several businesses and residences in the area needed for the new runway and south access road);
- $17 million – storm-water management improvements;
- $15 million – new Federal Aviation Administration (FAA)-required safety lighting and signs;
- $13 million – aircraft parking and apron improvements;
- $6 million – firefighting and snow-removal equipment;
- $28 million – airfield improvements;
- $127 million – renovation of the north terminal complex; and

- $368 million – new 25-gate international terminal.

In addition, Wayne County is proposing to spend $88 million for noise mitigation, including soundproofing or purchasing up to 670 homes in Romulus. Eleven million dollars of that amount is budgeted for purchasing homes located within the 75 dnl (decibel noise level) noise contour, and $54 million for installation of sound insulation or market-value purchase of homes within the 70–75 dnl noise contour area.

It should be noted that the sale of homes to Wayne County within the 70–75 dnl noise contour are at the option of the owner. These homeowners will not be forced to accept the County's purchase offer, which will be based on an independent appraiser's estimate of market value. Neither will the County be obligated to buy these homes at a price higher than the appraised value.

In addition, residents of approximately 880 homes in Romulus in the 65–70 dnl contour, plus hundreds in other communities, will be offered soundproofing or purchase assurance. According to the County, purchase assurance guarantees the homeowner the difference between the selling price and actual market value.

Other aspects of the expansion are already underway, including construction of a second crosswind runway near Eureka Road, construction of the first tunnel needed for the south access road, and construction of noise berms.

Properties purchased by the County for noise abatement are supposed to be cleared and marketed for noise-compatible uses. These areas are currently shown on the City's Master Land Use Plan as designated for industrial use.

As with all the other elements of the proposed Airport expansion program, the residential noise abatement program is subject to the future availability of funds and requires final approval by the Wayne County Commission. Because of the sizable cost of this ambitious program and the various approvals that are needed, the schedule provided by the County for its implementation is very much subject to change.

Romulus residents are encouraged to attend the meeting and participate in this program's formation. □

New Alumni Association Seeks To Make RHS "Coming Home" a Real Community Event

This year's winter homecoming at Romulus High School (RHS) is sure to be the biggest in the event's history, and much of the thanks is due to Tom Dolan, RHS principal, and Marjorie Bergman, Alumni Coordinator for the newly formed Romulus Alumni Association (RAA).

Bergman has organized several special programs for Homecoming Week, outside of those intended for the students, in the hope of getting the community – especially RHS alumni – involved in the festivities.

One of these events is a game of one-on-one, "one-armed" basketball, to be played between Dr. Harry Willnus, who teaches government at the High School, and WXYZ-TV/Channel 7 sports anchor, Don Shane. The two will face off in the new gymnasium at RHS on Thursday, February 4, at 1:30 p.m.

"We're really excited about the 'Dare Don' challenge," said Bergman, adding that all students who participate in activities for Coming Home during that week will be given passes to attend the taping in the gym.

Free passes to Friday's basketball game against Ann Arbor Pioneer will also be given to all entrants in the Week's activities.

Other events scheduled for "Coming Home" include an alumni reception – catered by Chuck Usztics from Enterprise High School – in the new Field House lobby; basketball tournaments; a "Chili Cook-off"; and chess, checkers, and euchre tournaments. Although you don't have to be an alumnus to participate in activities such as the Cook-off and the euchre tournament, you must register ahead of time. Bergman will continue to take registrations for the basketball tournament until Friday, January 29; the deadline for the Chili Cook-off and the other tournaments is Wednesday, February 3. To enter, call Bergman at the High School (941-2170) weekdays between 7 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Dolan and Bergman see the RAA as an organization with great potential for community involvement. One recent letter which they sent to RHS alumni, in an effort to recruit membership in the RAA, stated, "As we at Romulus work toward rebuilding our schools, we feel the time is right to recognize and celebrate the positive history of Romulus High School and to include our alumni in building toward an exciting future. You can serve as positive role models for Romulus students in sharing work and educational experiences, job counseling, mentoring, and counseling. We need your help now to 'make our best even better'."

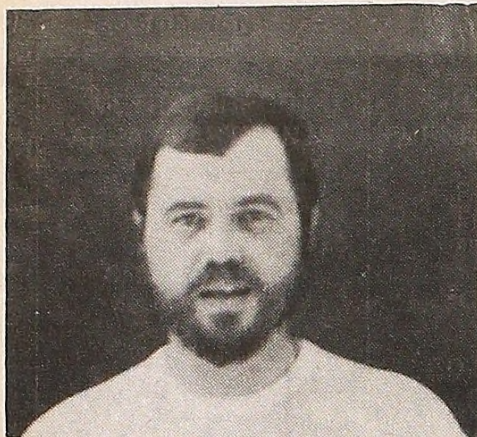

Other plans to benefit local youth include earmarking all dues monies for student scholarships.

Computer Bits and Bytes

By Tom Shamanski

A month ago, I finally decided to leap into the 1970s (one decade at a time, please) and learn some vital stuff about computers. Up until then, I viewed computers as I viewed a Picasso: nice to look at, but what the heck is it? Plus, I'm not exactly what you'd call a forward-looking guy. To me, prime time means the 1950s, hardware is a store, software is cotton pajamas and Angora sweaters, and a bottom line is, "Hi, do you come here often?" But, despite these foot-dragging tendencies, I sensed that I'd better latch onto The Good Ship Technology before I blew my job to a 12-year-old key-punching whiz.

I should tell you, folks, that my final decision was heavenly influenced by my sister, Judy, who has her own dance studio. She knew that I'd been tinkering with the idea of taking a computer class. Apparently, she had been scheming and lying in wait, as she wanted me to take the course and computerize her business stuff. Finally, her moment came one lazy Sunday afternoon, just as I began emerging from a delicious nap, rubbing my eyes and wiggling my toes. Squinting, I vaguely glimpsed her standing above me, smiling, and heard, "Gee, I hope you had a good nap. Oh, by the way, if you'll take that computer class and program my studio, I'll pay half your intuition."

"Okay," I yawned before I was awake enough to comprehend the consequences of my answer. That was it — she had me!

Now, after a few classes, I'm more bewildered about computers than before, but with assurances that this is common. . . . Right! But I have learned some, ah, interesting computer lingo — like, for instance, "Garbage In, Garbage Out." Heck, that's nothing new; my body's been screaming that for years! Then, there's the term, "user friendly." Please, can anyone tell me why computer people even need that phrase? I mean, did IBM, at some unenlightened point, crank out a computer that punched back? Did it spit data into the user's eye, or perhaps byte the hand feeding it?

Forget computers on this. . . . There are lots of real-life instances where "user friendly" would be nice. Most of us, I'm sure, could use a tad more user friendliness from our bosses. (We, of course, being the "used" factor in this equation!) Also, it would be terrific if my car was user friendly. My gosh, at times, that old Escort seems to compute the moment that I'm least able to cope with an automotive overload . . . and then self-destructs based upon that data!

Sugar! Imagine if sugar became user friendly! Certainly, sugary calories would vanish and, if it became extremely friendly, maybe sugar would even search out and destroy fat cells. I'm sure I could input cookies and donuts all day, knowing that I was cruising to slim-and-trim land.

"Electronic mail" is a somewhat confusing term. I had best re-read my text's definition of EM (warning: computer-types thrive on initials and acronyms, IYKWIM), since electronic mail sounds suspiciously like Morse code to me — definitely not user friendly!

Lastly, I've noticed that many news stories about computers make mention of people called "hackers." Again, I'm not sure what a hacker is, but big bucks are usually involved in these stories. Hmmm . . . does anyone offer classes in hacking? Maybe I'm taking the wrong course! □

Four Star Chefs To Share Secrets at WW Gourmet Cooking Series To Benefit Area's Hungry

If you still think that all gourmet cuisine is fattening, guess again. Four star chefs from around the metro Detroit area will show you otherwise as they demonstrate their famous recipes, altered to fit healthier life-styles, at Weight Watchers' second annual Gourmet Cooking Series.

Working closely with Weight Watchers food advisor Debby Rowe will be Chef Thomas MacKinnon of MacKinnon's in Northville, Chef Ron Hokanson of 333 East in the Omni International Hotel-Detroit, Chef Larry Meyer of Rachel's in Trenton, and Chef Maren Jackson of Seva in Ann Arbor. Each has tailored some of his/her famous recipes to fit the all-new 1993 Weight Watchers Program.

After receiving his culinary training, Chef MacKinnon took his training overseas to Romeyer in Hoillert, Belgium, with mentor Pierre Romeyer; Wittameyer in Brussels, Belgium, with mentor Paul Wittameyer; and Chateau D'Ansembourg in Luxembourg.

Chef Hokanson, a lifetime member of Weight Watchers, has lost 40 pounds. Trained in the French and Italian traditions of culinary technique, he has developed a new-found interest in altering classical recipes to fit the Program.

Chef Meyer began working as a line cook at Rachel's in December of 1991, then became chef in April. Prior to joining the team at Rachel's, Meyer worked at a variety of restaurants, including the Sheraton Westgate in Toledo, Mountain Jack's in Ann Arbor, the Sylvan Resort in Gaylord, and Opus One in Detroit.

After graduating from the University of Illinois with a degree in biology, Chef Jackson moved to Ann Arbor to earn a degree in engineering from University of Michigan, and began working at Seva while pursuing her studies. Gradually, Jackson became more interested in cooking than in engineering. She's been busy ever since, creating meatless meals for this vegetarian restaurant.

Anyone who likes to cook – or just likes to eat healthy – is invited to attend demonstrations of these recipes by the chefs who made them famous, beginning Saturday, February 6, and continuing every Saturday in February from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Weight Watchers' Test Kitchen, 28555 Orchard Lake Road (between 12 & 13 Mile Road), Farmington Hills.

"Eating should be a pleasurable and satisfying experience, filled with a wonderful variety of foods," said Florine Mark, president and CEO of WW Group, Inc., the largest franchise of Weight Watchers International. "Our Gourmet Cooking Series shows you how easy it can be to prepare gourmet cuisine that's not only delicious, but nutritious and healthy."

Admission to each session is one bag of nonperishable groceries (minimum $10 value) to be donated to "Dieters Feed the Hungry," a nonprofit organization which will distribute all food donations to the Hunger Action Coalition of Detroit.

Each chef has prepared a "theme" menu for his appearance.

On February 6, Chef Thomas MacKinnon of MacKinnon's will show you healthy ways to create "Royal Entrees" fit for a king or queen.

On February 13, Chef Ron Hokanson of 333 East helps you prepare for Valentine's Day with a "Taste of Romance" – wonderful recipes to capture the healthy heart of someone you love.

Then, on February 20, get the "Down-home Basics" with Chef Larry Meyer of Rachel's, as he cooks up some healthy fun with delightful down-home recipes.

Chef Maren Jackson of Seva wraps up the series on February 27 when she prepares a "Very Vegetarian" menu of food that's both elegant and savory.

Reservations for the Gourmet Cooking Series are required, as seating is limited. Please call (800) 487-4777, ext. 294, to reserve your place. There will be tasting demonstrations, door prizes, and recipes for those in attendance.

Remember: If you can choose what you eat, you're in a position to help someone who can't. Millions of requests for food are made at area food banks each year. At the same time, many people are trying to lose weight. Help Weight Watchers balance the scales: attend the Weight Watchers Gourmet Cooking Series to benefit the hungry. □

"Our Home"

What Is Meant by Pre-qualifying?

By Celia Chesno, realtor

So, you've decided to buy a new home! You even drove around the area that you think you would like to live in . . . and you saw . . . what might be . . . THE HOUSE! (In fact, you saw a few. . .)

What to do now? You called your local realtor and told her that you wanted to see these houses, and asked her to help you find what you're looking for.

"Great!" she responds. "Let's get to work on finding your new home. First, have you been pre-qualified?"

PRE-qualified? you think to yourself. I want a house; isn't that qualification enough? But you don't say anything because you don't want her to think that you don't know what she's talking about.

"If you haven't been pre-qualified yet," she continues, "let me give you the names of a few of the loan officers we deal with."

LOAN OFFICER? I haven't even decided for sure that I want to buy a house, and already you're saying words like LOAN OFFICER!

Immediately, she sees that you aren't sure what she means; she explains. . .

Realtors have people talk to a loan officer before the search for a home begins for a few different reasons. First, we owe it to the people who are selling their homes to bring in only people who are able to buy. Second, it would be heart-rending to find the home of your dreams, only to find out that there's no way you can afford to buy it. And third, it helps us determine whether there will be any problems obtaining a loan, and what kind of loan would best suit your needs.

Generally, a loan officer can pre-qualify you right over the phone. He is going to ask you some questions about your finances, such as: your income for the last two years (find those old W-2 forms), your debt structure (which will include car loans, charge-card debts, installment loans, etc.), and your cash position (how much money you have in the bank, investments, and the like), and then he will do a "number analysis" and see what the outcome is. You must remember that there is no obligation, and that all this information is kept confidential. Loan officers know that you have a job and a home, and that your time is at a premium, and they will adjust their schedule to talk with you at your convenience. If you have a difficult time with this procedure, you can ask your realtor to meet with you and the loan officer to go over the paperwork. It's really very easy!

Feel free to call if I can assist you. You can reach me at Century 21 Suburban (464-0205) or my home (941-5704). I also carry a beeper (941-0941) so that you can contact me at any time. □

Teen Talk: Health

AMA's New Guidelines on Teen Health

By Kathleen Conway, director, Romulus Adolescent Health Center

In December, the American Medical Association (AMA) issued new guidelines to improve the health of our young people. Specifically, the guidelines include a recommendation that people ages 11 to 21 receive annual checkups that include screening for emotional and sexual problems and eating disorders. According to the director of the AMA's Department of Adolescent Health, Dr. Arthur Elster, that age group "puts itself at risk through life-style behavior such as experimenting with drugs and unsafe sexual practices."

Traditionally, once children get into the preadolescent years, the regularity of physical exams decreases. We all take the time to get our little ones to the doctor for a checkup and immunizations, but, once they no longer need regular shots, they stop seeing the doctor on a regular basis.

At the Health Center, we see many students who say that they haven't seen a doctor since they were five years old. Many others do not even have a regular doctor. One parent told me that her 14-year-old daughter had never been to a doctor in her life except when she was sick, and that no one had ever examined the girl thoroughly.

The purpose of the AMA guidelines – and, hopefully, these guidelines will be followed by Area physicians – is the creation of a stronger emphasis on prevention in the treatment of the health problems of adolescents, as opposed to a symptom-complaint approach (they complain of a problem and it is treated).

The guidelines developed include the following recommendations.

- All adolescents should be screened for eating disorders.
- All adolescents should be asked about tobacco, alcohol, and drug use.
- Sexually active adolescents should be screened for sexually transmitted diseases.
- All adolescents should be offered confidential AIDS testing if the circumstances indicate that the test should be done.
- All adolescents should be screened for high blood-pressure and heart-disease risks.

A major worry for many physicians is that teens aren't always as honest as they should be about their problems and risky activities, especially where sexual activity, drugs, alcohol, and family problems are concerned. These guidelines will focus on encouraging physicians and others to be more alert to potential problems with this age group.

Children to age five can receive immunizations. Blue Cross, Medicaid, and private insurances are accepted. Fees are affordable and vary according to the patient's ability to pay. No one is denied services if unable to pay. Appointments are usually necessary; some walk-ins are accepted. Parents must sign a consent form for their child to be seen at the Center. The Matador Hair Salon (located at 1724 E. Huron River Dr. in New Boston) is honored to have Shirley Daktor, a lady barber, join its team of fine stylists.

The Hand of Hope

Successful Weight Loss

By Todd Hauter, certified hypnotherapist
(313-941-7084)

In my last article, I discussed the imaginary "nourishment cake," which is cut into approximately 12 portions that we then label with either physical or emotional "nourishments."

It has been found that those who are overweight frequently label their cake's pieces with nothing but food items. These people need to re-list the pieces of the cake, factoring in fun things to do (like going to the theater or taking a walk) in place of some of the foods. If an overweight person is able to do this, he/she will shortly find that food isn't life's only source of pleasure.

Imagine that your body is a tape player. Instead of responding to your overweight condition by selecting the "binge" tape, select a tape that will offer you some physical nourishment or emotional support. Listen to positive life affirmations; remove your negative thoughts and begin to experience life with new options.

Your attire speaks for you if you've been on the "yo-yo" ride up and down the weight scale. More than likely, your closet contains clothes of more than one size, since you have grown to accept major gains and losses.

Pick your ideal weight and size, toss out those bigger wardrobe items, and re-program yourself for a more positive attitude. By discarding the old thoughts and starting fresh with positive input, you can maintain your own weight. Improve on your self-image, which you can do by reaching out to other people. You can start by saying nice things about those you love and about your friends. You will find that, if you make other people happy, your self-image will improve.

Self-esteem and self-image play an important role in making the changes needed in a weight-loss program. You should:

- respect your body,
- want to live and love others, and
- create self-love for the new you.

By using relaxation and guided imagery, you can explore the new you. We give an individual the opportunity to visualize the changes needed so that they can begin the transformation.

The power of positive thinking can change more appearances than any diet supplement or pills.

Live a longer, healthier, happier life. . . . Lose weight and do your heart a favor. □

Romulus Schools Receives Northwest Airlines RIF Grant

The Reading Is Fundamental (RIF) program conducted by Romulus Community Schools has been awarded one of many Northwest Airlines grants to local RIF projects for outstanding service in motivating youngsters to read. The grant will be used to purchase additional books for children.

Through the work of local volunteers and the guidance of National RIF headquarters in Washington, D.C., the Romulus RIF program inspires children to read through planned reading-related activities and by making it possible for youngsters to choose and to own books that interest them, without cost to them or their families.

In the two years since the RIF program was established in Romulus, it has enabled Area youngsters to become the proud owners of more than 5,000 good books.

"The Northwest Airlines grant will help us continue providing a wide variety of books that awaken and nurture youngsters' interest in reading," Terrel M. LeCesne, Assistant Superintendent, said. "RIF's unique approach makes youngsters want to read. And the more they read, the more their skills improve."

Founded in 1966, Reading Is Fundamental is a National, nonprofit organization that helps children discover the joy and importance of reading through a Nationwide network of 3,500 local projects such as the one in Romulus. RIF also assists parents who want to encourage reading in the home. □

Some C-c-cold Weather Tips To Warm Ice Anglers

Now is the time for all good Michigan "snowbirds" to shun the golf courses and sandy beaches of the south and try ice fishing, instead.

Crazy? Hey, don't judge it till you try it, advises AAA Michigan. Thousands do every year and swear that it's the only way to enjoy the exhilaration of winter in the Michigan mitten.

But whether you're enjoying the free-spirited camaraderie of other anglers or solving the world's problems in fishing solitude, there are precautions to observe — from ice conditions to how to dress — before joining some 300,000 ice-fishing enthusiasts on the Great Lakes and 11,000 inland lakes in the State, starting with a fishing license if you're 17 or older.

"In general, starting with ice thickness," said AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager, Jerry Basch, "four solid inches are needed for general foot traffic; six inches or more for controlled snowmobile or all-terrain vehicle use."

Other things to remember:

- Never drive a car or truck onto frozen lakes to your fishing spot because harmonic vibrations set up by heavy, moving vehicles may crack the thickest ice.
- Not all waters freeze evenly. Ice may be solid and safe in one location while, a few feet away, springs, currents, or air bubbles may mean a dangerously thin covering. Eroding currents make river ice especially dangerous and unpredictable. Stay off frozen streams.
- Clear ice has been quickly frozen and, generally, is harder and will support more weight than "milk ice" filled with snow or air bubbles. Darkly discolored ice indicates thin spots and should be avoided.
- Expansion of freezing ice on certain large lakes and protected Great Lakes bays occasionally forces the ice sheets upward into ridges, leaving open water between the fractured shards.
- Beware of potential danger on ice next to piers, wharves, seawalls, pilings, and floating debris, such as abandoned fishing shanties, because it's usually thinner than the rest of the ice.

One of the most comfortable ways to enjoy ice fishing is in a heated shanty — but, again, some important precautions are necessary:

- Make sure that your heater is properly vented to avoid deadly carbon monoxide gas.
- Bottled gas (propane, butane, and natural gas) heaters may require the crack of a window or door for ventilation, but charcoal and wood burners need to be vented with a chimney of appropriate design.

Proper dress and eating habits are important, too, on your ice-fishing venture, AAA Michigan advises.

Dressing in layers is the ticket, so that outer garments can be peeled off if you get to warm. Because most heat-loss occurs through the head, wearing a hat is vital, as is covering extremities such as feet, hands, and ears, which receive less blood circulation.

Dehydration in dry winter air is as much a problem as it is in summer. Avoid alcoholic beverages because alcohol restricts blood vessels, hampering blood flow to extremities. Frequent snacks of high-energy foods such as dried fruit, granola, trail mix, nuts, or carbohydrates is desirable.

A well-prepared angler also carries at least 50 feet of synthetic rope to help others who may fall through thin ice; a spud or heavy ice chisel to probe ice thickness; and two spikes or large nails to help himself/herself should he/she plunge into the water.

In this worst-case scenario, orient your body in a horizontal position, as if swimming. Place your hands, palms down, on the ice surface and attempt to do a "push-up" while using a swimming kick to thrust you out of the hole onto safe ice; then roll to safety. Stand only after reaching safe ice; then go immediately to shore to change clothes and warm up. Spikes or large nails, pushed into the surrounding ice, also can help you pull to safety. □
